WHAT HAPPENED TO THE DINOSAURS?

Many theories attempt to explain the mysterious extinction of the dinosaurs. One hypothesis states that a nearby supernova exploded sixty-five million years ago, flooding Earth with lethal radiation. A supernova is the explosion of a massive star that has reached the end of its life.

Such exploding stars are extremely rare; four centuries have passed since one occurred within our Milky Way galaxy. While it's likely that supernovae have occurred within our cosmic neighborhood during the billion-year history of life on Earth, no one is certain what effect such an event may have had.
